

Seriously Resistant – complete our antibiotics survey

The NHS and Leeds City Council are taking action to help tackle the issue around antimicrobial resistance which could mean that in the very near future antibiotics no longer work. If this prediction is correct then people will be at risk of dying from common infections that are currently treatable, so a paper cut could prove deadly and treatments for conditions such as cancer will be ineffective. To tackle this we've launched a campaign called Seriously Resistant.

Seriously Resistant (www.seriouslyresistant.com) is encouraging people to find out if they would be cut out for life in 2050 by taking a short quiz before making a pledge to ensure we all use antibiotics wisely. To help us with the next phase of our campaign we want people to do a short survey so we get a better understanding of people's awareness of antibiotics.

Please help us by completing this survey <https://www.surveymonkey.co.uk/r/XLKQN5Q>, by completing the survey you could win a £25 Amazon voucher